Aloha

Hawaii used to be called the Sandwich Islands. A Hawaiian luau is more than just a feast of foods, it's a feast of friendship as well. "Mahalo" means thank you in Hawaiian. The hula tells a story not with the hips, but with the hands.

Go Hawaiian and have a luau. Everyone could bring their beach towel and you could play the game by giving points.

- 5 pts for each color in the towel
- 5 pts if the towel is taller than they are
- 10 pts if it has words on it
- 25 pts if it has a location on it
- 10 pts if there is a hole in the towel
- 20 pts if it features an advertisement
- 20 pts if the manufacturer tag is still on it
- 20 pts if there is an animal on the towel
- 20 pts if you have the exact same towel as someone else

You could do the party outside and have everyone bring a lawn chair and award points for sturdy, colorful, newest, ragged, faded, nylon, multicolor, most different etc.

Or you could play the "draw the lake" game. Hand out a sheet of paper. Once they start they need to look at you and not at the picture. Draw a lake in the middle of the page, put a picnic table on one side, a palm tree on the other, a child swimming in the lake, coconuts in the tree, campfire by the table, a pier in the water, some Tupperware on the table, tie a boat up to the pier and now put the sun in the sky. Give points for their drawing, the fun is looking at it. Take away points if the Tupperware is in the fire or the boats on the land. Give points for rays on the sun and number of coconuts etc.

Hawaiian Burgers

Make hamburger patties and press a pineapple ring into the top of each burger. Wrap a piece of raw bacon around the edge of the burger (like a bacon wrapped filet), secure with a toothpick. Put the burgers in the Season Serve and marinade with teriyaki sauce for as long as you have. Grill and serve on hamburger buns.

Give ideas on summertime uses for Tupperware products. Keep the party short and talk about cool refreshing recipes. Give the host a chance to select a recipe that she may want to make ahead of time. Maybe the slush, with fresh fruit and dip and you could make the pineapple upside down cake at the party.
