Every Shower Needs Special Planning

A Bridal Shower needs a little extra planning, but it is well worth the extra effort! At a shower, you are actually holding two parties in one! The guests will be contributing toward gift Tupperware for the Bride and will have the opportunity to purchase personal items too.

The Host decides ahead of time who will receive Host credit.

Host gifts earned with total sales and datings can be presented to the Bride as a group gift, or can be retained by the Host as regular party credit.

The Bride will already be receiving her gift Tupperware.

Please discuss this option ahead of time with the Host so there is no confusion at the time of the shower.

Invitations

Bridal Shower invitations work well with an insert that we provide. (See insert sample next page). The insert explains how the shower works and includes all of the party information. It is suggested that the Consultant furnish a Congratulatory Card for the guests to sign at the party. The guests bring the amount of money they would personally like to contribute for the Bride's Tupperware gift in an envelope and the money is collected and counted before the shower. Then the total gift amount is announced and presented to the bride as the shower begins. The bride selects that amount of Tupperware from the current catalog while guests can place personal orders.

Bridal Shower Preparation "Dress Up" your display!

A few extra decorations make a Bridal Shower really special. Find out wedding colors and add a few bows or netting to your display in those colors.

You might consider making a corsage or "bouquet" out of Tupperware gadgets.

Bridal Shower games are played and a short demo is given highlighting brand new products, sales specials, and Host Gift Specials. Bridal shower demos should be brief!

The focus should be on the Bride, placing her order, and giving time for guests to place personal orders, date the Bride for a party in her new home, and date guests.

The Bride's order form could be rolled up like a diploma and tied with a ribbon, Mark the order form "paid", and make sure that the guests know how much the Bride has to spend. Everyone will have fun seeing what she selects! (The Bride selects that amount in retail Tupperware including tax. She does not have the option of keeping the cash. Please discuss this ahead of time with the Bride and the Host). A Doorprize could be given to the guest with an anniversary closest to the wedding date!

(If a guest is single, she could use her birthdate.)
