Surprise Gift

Take past or extra Tupperware products and wrap attractively. Display this during the entire party. When doing your dating message, offer the package to anyone who dates a party within the next seven days and they'll receive this as an added bonus.

Mystery Host Party

To increase sales and datings, host a party in your own home. Send invitations to everyone you can think of explaining that one person will be selected to be the Host and will get the sales credit for the Host gifts. Encourage them to bring in outside sales for another chances in the Host drawing.

Mystery Envelope

Pin an envelope on your Host at the beginning of the party with a big question mark on it. Announce to the guest that your Host is working to earn the Host Gift Special and she'll need two people to date future parties in order for her to receive it. When the first two people date, the Host and the two datings will receive a special piece of Tupperware that's identified on a piece of paper inside the envelope.

Necklace Dating

To create fun and make it easy to fill your datebook, involve the Host in the dating process. Before the party, make three necklaces using ribbon and Smidget® Containers. Wrap ribbon below the seal, tie in a knot and leave an extra three inches to tie together the longer end to make a necklace. Fill each Smidget® with small candies. Have the Host wear all three necklaces at the party. When someone asks about the necklaces, she'll give one to those who date a party.

Grab Bag

Make several "grab" bags using brown lunch bags and pretty gift bags. Place a Tiny Treasure inside each bag and write a date on each bag. The date represents available party dates. Display these gift bags. During your dating message, have them select a bag. When the first person does, have her reveal what's in the bag and announce that she'll receive the bigger version of the Tiny Treasure at her party.

Gift Basket

Before the Party, make a gift basket filled with Tupperware, bath and body items, kitchen gadgets, etc. and estimate the value. At the Party, tell, do not show, the guests you have a gift basket with $_____ worth of must have items.

For attending the demonstration, they automatically receive one entry; date a party and receive 10 entries; bring an outside order and receive 5 entries; bring a guest and receive another 5 entries; become a Consultant and receive 15 entries.

Have the drawing at the end of the party and present the gift. Have the winner show what she's won to encourage others to Host a party.
